

PROPERTY RIGHTS

APRIL 23–29, 2004, TUCSON

This institute will examine the ways in which property rights have crucially contributed to our freedom and prosperity, with the assistance of scholars from Anthropology, History and Economics. It will also examine extensions of property rights in such areas as intellectual property and telecommunications.

Property Law
and the Origins
of English Individualism

Alan Macfarlane
Anthropology,
Kings College, Cambridge

Property and Freedom

Richard Pipes
History, Harvard

Economics of Property Law

Harold Demsetz
Economics, UCLA

Takings

Richard Epstein
University of Chicago Law School

Intellectual Property

Richard Epstein

Tort Law and Property Rights

Paul Rubin
Economics, Emory

Property Rights in the Telecosm

Tom Hazlett
Manhattan Institute

Alan Macfarlane is the author of The Origins of English Individualism, The Riddle of the Modern World, and The Savage Wars of Peace. Richard Pipes is the author of Property and Freedom and Communism: A History. Harold Demsetz is one of the founders of law-and-economics and the person who more than anyone developed the modern economic theory of property rights. Richard Epstein is one of the most prolific legal scholars and the author of Principles of a Free Society. Paul Rubin is an economist who has extensively published on the economics of tort law. Tom Hazlett is a leading expert on telecommunications policy.

RICHARD PIPES

RICHARD EPSTEIN